i am offering a great old black & white promo photograph of a group of actors, possibly Mack Sennett's Keystone studio players. obvious in the front row are Fatty Arbuckle flanked by Mabel Normand & Al St. John. Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle (1887-1933), was one of the great innovators of comedy in the very earliest moving pictures. he mentored & influenced Chaplin & Keaton & his output of films was large & popular. after a bogus scandal in 1921 he never recovered his place in Hollywood. he is pictured here next to Mabel Normand who was a great star in her own right, & who made several films with Arbuckle, & Sennett. on his other side is his nephew Al St. John who also had a busy career, appearing in Sennett's Keystone Kops films & anything with his uncle. a keen eye will spot many other early actors from those early days of movies, many are character actors & comic actors who had long careers in Hollywood. this photograph is probably from the late nineteen-teens. this photograph is not stamped or marked with any clues as to where or when it was taken, or by whom.. this photograph measures about 8.5 x 6.5 inches, & is in ok condition, as can be seen in the scan. it has a torn bit top center & small tears at the corners, some tack holes & a few creases. it is, nevertheless, an amazing image. i am charging $2.00 S&H in the states & $4.00 elsewhere. thank you for looking!
